D-Orbit Names Pietro Guerrieri New Vice President of Sales and Business Development

(Como, Italy) D-Orbit recently announced Pietro Guerrieri's nomination as the new Vice-President of Sales and Business Development. Guerrieri will head the development of promising business opportunities in alignment with both market demands and international regulations for the space industry, leveraging on optimizing end-of-life operations for any spacecraft.

In almost thirty years working in the space sector, Pietro Guerrieri has covered a wide range of functions for key European players including Telespazio, Eutelsat and SES Astra. As General Manager for the Italian branch of the Luxembourg operator, he directed the business development for the Italian and Greek market.

"Pietro Guerrieri's valuable experience in working with important satellite operators is a fundamental element that will maximize D-Orbit's innovative solutions for the satellite platforms market." Stated D-Orbit's CEO, Luca Rossetti.

Pietro Guerrieri agrees, "I am very proud to be nominated for such an important and diverse role within such a dynamic company like D-Orbit, whose great strength is found in its extraordinary team."

D-Orbit is an Italian company engaged in the development of space technology with high strategic value for the future of satellite applications. Its main product D₃ is an innovative propulsion system that simplifies the removal of defunct satellites from orbit at their end of life.

With the recent closing of a new investment round, D-Orbit prepares to launch its D-SAT, the first satellite in the world that will be removed from space in a safe and rapid manner at its end-of-mission.
